

Give Freely Receive Freely

What is it?

Give freely receive freely is a philosophy that there is plenty in this world for everyone to live abundantly, and the key to unlocking this abundance is to be free in our exchange with each other.

In practical terms this means that there is no fixed price for goods and services, people pay what they want to for what they receive.

How do I decide how much to pay?

Your payment should reflect three things:

1. Your gratitude for what you have received and the value it has for you in your life
2. Recognition of the work and expense that has gone into providing what you receive (people offering goods and services on this basis have all the same costs and overheads as other businesses)
3. What you can afford

You determine for yourself the value of what you receive, and pay only what you can afford. For some people this will mean paying the same as they would have under a normal fixed price system, for others it may mean paying more or less according to your judgement of value and personal financial circumstances.

What are the benefits of this system?

Under this system of exchange everyone is able to afford what they want and need, no-one has to go without. Also each of us actively participates in the shaping of our society into a better place as we choose to pay more for those things we appreciate and less for those things we don't.

Interesting concept? Find out more at:
www.givefreelyreceivefreely.com